

Trinity Business School, Dublin

This state-of-the-art building, located on the busy, live campus in Dublin city, is to be approximately 12,000m² over 7 storeys housing lecture theatres, teaching space, offices, study space and an atrium. The new business school building will support activities of the TCD School of Business, Innovation and Entrepreneurship.

Client
Trinity College Dublin

Architect
Scott Tallon Walker

Value
£42.6 million

Entrances to the new Business School from Pearse Street and the campus are at ground floor level and give access to a triangular atrium space which provides break-out space and an Exhibition area, access to the upper level of the 600 person auditorium and informal meeting and gathering space.

Stairs and passenger lifts give access to all lower and upper floors. A 200 seat restaurant/ catering facility is provided within the ground floor space of the Period Buildings along Pearse Street and in the ground floor section of the new building adjacent.

A feature helical staircase within the atrium gives access to the upper basement level where the lower level of the main auditorium and the undergraduate 200 seat raked auditorium are located.

